WAR CLOUDS GATHERING OVER TURK QUESTION

COUNTY HORRIFIED OVER ROAD HOUSE TRADEGY

INDIGNATION AT ROADHOUSE AUTO TRAGEDY

Hell's Half Acre," the name that is being generally applied to that section of San Pablo avenue,running from the county line to the town of San Pablo, is fast making a reputation in keeping with the many rumors that are spread about as to what is going on in many of the "soft drink" joints in El Cerrito, and the town of San Pablo.

The tragedy yesterday morning, in which two persons lost their lives, and an account of which was given exclusively in the Record-Herald Thursday morning, has focused the eyes of the Eastbay communities on that section.

Already there is strong talk among the citizens, that a good government league is to be organized, and it is possible that the citizens themselves, may see that the places along San Pablo avenue where revels are carried on till all hours of the morning, become a thing of the past.

It is stated on good authority, that before the parties in the tragedy left what is known as the "Poppy," a place of questionable character, at the corner of San Pablo avenue and Schmidt Lane, there was a general row, and that some of the participants were taken to a Berkeley hospital.

In addition to the "Poppy," along the avenue, there is the "Cinderella," Lafayette Park, and at the town of San Pablo, there is the Country Inn, and other joints of a similar character.

The general report is that liquor is sold openly in all of these places, and in most of them dances by women partially or wholly naked, and other obscene practices, are permitted, that would not be tolerated in practically any red-light district.

Just how long these places are to be permitted to continue to practice their nefarious trade, is what an anxious public is waiting to see.

Less than two weeks ago the news that the proposed "Little Volstead Act" had failed to pass its second reading before the board of trustees appeared in the headlines of the Record-Herald. This measure which had been drawn up and formulated by persons of the El Cerrito district who fostered an honest desire for a clean and uprightcity was probably killed by the liquo interests. Its failure to pass virtual left the city without any means of combating the illicit sale of booze and the infernal whirl of night life that contaminates the San Pablo avenue district, "the rottenest place per square inch on the face of God's earth."

The inquest of the remains of those who met with the tragic death, will be held next Monday evening by Coroner Charles Mannelly, and at that time, it is very likely that many sensational details will be brought to light.

Former Richmond Man Is President Of Solano Legion

Vallejo, Sept. 21.—Nat G. Welburn, commander of Vallejo Post No. 104, American Legioin and National Legion speaker, was further honored in legion circles yesterday by being unanimously elected president of the Solano Council of American Legion posts. The newly formed council embraces the posts of Benicia, Winfield, Suisun, Dixon, Vacaville and Vallejo.

Commander Welburn will act as chairman of the $10.000,000 veterans' bond campaign in the Third Congressional District. He will speak throughout the district on the issues of Proposition 1 and 3.

Welburn was formerly a resident of Richmond where he was deputy internal Revenue Collector.

Show Case to Boost Local PublicLibrary

An advertising exhibit case has been installed by the Richmond Public Library on Macdonald avenue, near Ninth street. It is believed that the new show case will do for the library what the show window does in the life of a modern department store. The time has come when a modern librarian should not sit behind her counter and wait for the people to come to her for her wares, the local library officials believe. They think that a labrary as well as any other enterprise or business should "tell the world" what is to be had and where to get it.

The initial exhibit in the newly erected show case proves very conclusively that the Richmond book house has literature that is of interest to young and old, rich and poor; in fact, a book to suit every human being in the city.

AUDITORIUM AT JUNIOR HIGH ASSURED

After a conference between members of the school board and P. M. Sanford, it was announced yesterday that the contract for the new auditorium at the Roosevelt junior high school had been agreed upon and that the erection of the building would commence in the immediate future.

W. T. Helms, superintendent of schools, said that during the conference with Sanford certain modifications in the plans and contract were made and the contract was let to Sanford. The cost of construction will be somewhat less than the lowest estimate given at the meeting last week, which was $60,000.

Sanford is the general contractor for the junior high school. The auditorium, according to the present plan, will be the largest in the city with a seating capacity of 1500. It will constitute a wing of the junior high school building.

Richmond Products at Eastbay Exposition

One of the most interesting exhibits to be shown at the second annual East Bay Manufacturers' Exposition, to be given at Idora Park, Oakland, October 14 to 22, inclusive, will be that of the Standard Oil Company of California.

The varied products of the company's oil refinery here at Richmond will be on display and will disclose the hundreds of biproducts from crude oil as turned out at the Richmond refinery. Heavy grease to delicate perfumed oils will be included in the exhibit.

Roland L. Oliver, general manager of the California Cap Works at Stege, and chairman of the executive committee of manufacturers directing the exposition, is highly pleased with the interest being taken both by the factories and the general public.

OIL TANKER COLLIDES WITH STEAMER IN FOG

The Union Oil Tanker, La Purisima, which left Martinez some time ago with a cargo of oil, was reported to have rammed the steamer Floridian while the latter ship was riding at anchor in San Pedro harbor, at San Pedro, California. The channel was very foggy at the time the collision occurred and the tanker crew failed to see the Floridian riding at anchor ahead of them.

BRITAIN WARN WARNING; U.S. KEEPING AWAY

Washington, Sept. 2.—Emphatic denial of a London dispath that the United States would send General Peyton C. Marsh to the Near East as an unofficial observer, was made at the State Department today.

William Phillips, acting Secretary of State, said that no such move had been under consideration nor was contemplated. This emphasized the White House statement of Tuesday that the United States purposes to keep out of the Turkish situation.

American destroyers will remain in the vicinity of Smyrna to protect American lives and property and Admiral Mark Bristol will continue to represent the State Department in general relief work for all refugees. That is to be the full extent of participation by the United States government.

London, Sept. 21.—In allied diplomitac circles tonight it is reported that the Turkish Nationals are on the point of issuing an ultimatum to the allies, demanding the evacuation of Thrace in forty-eight hours.

Italy officially informed Rumania today that she will not permit any action by Bulgaria which would change the present status quo in the Balkans, and is ready, if necessary, to take recourse to military measures.

The French and Italian detachments and flags were withdrawn today from the neutral zones of Ismid and the Dardenalles on orders from he respecive governments.

Britain will not withdraw its forces from Chanak until absolute guarantees have been reecived from Mustapha Kemal that the Turks will not violate the neutral zone.

This statement was made by an official at Downing street today, and according to this same source the government will not be influenced to give up the Asiatic side of the straits on any other condition.

It is confidently expected here that an eight-power conference will be held at Venice before the end of the month and that Rusia will probably be called in later to consider any agreement that is reached.

California Building Discussed at Meeting

An interesting and profitable meeting was held by Richmond Lodge No. 550, Loyal Order of Moose, last evening in Moose hall. Plans were further made for the joint meeting of Richmond Lodge and the Women of Mooseheart Legion, to be held on next Thursday evening.

At next Thursday's meeting plans will be laid for the drive to secure funds for the proposed California building to be constructed at Mooseheart, Ill., at a cost of $35,000.

Richmond Lodge started the drive last week by contributeing $550 into the fund.

Next week's session will be addressed by Dr. W. F. Fraser, who attended the recent convention of the Supreme Lodge at Mooseheart as a delegate from Richmond.

A. A. Bennett, dictator, presided over last night's meeting.

R. A. Read Will Move Business to Eighth St.

R. A. Read of the Read Dry Goods Company stated last evening that he expected to be in his new building on Eighth street between Macdonald and Nevin avenue, in the next sixty days.

Read's move will be the first one of a retailer moving on to one of the cross streets, but it is his firm opinion that many other merchants will follow in the next year.

Read's new store will be most modern in every respect, and he intends that it will be one of the attractive merchandising places of the city.

Rev. Cedric Price Flays Night Life

In his sermon on "The Man Who Laughed at God" at the First Christian church revival service last night, Evangelist Cedric G. Price, said "The incident around which the thought of the evening is to center is one that transpired some three thousand years or so ago. It is recorded away back in the beginning days of the Old Testament scriptures. It has to do with King Ahab, as he filched away from the honest farmer Nathan his ancestral possession.

As a matter of fact, however, as I begin my evening message, I feel that in order to illustrate and drive the idea home to the consciousness of every one of you I have only to recall the incidents of last night's tragedy on the highway at the very edge of your city. The fair name of Richmond—as is the fair name of Berkeley and Oakland—is not only being besmirched by all such episodes, an ancient law of Almighty God is being verified by them as well. A man simply can't sow the wind without reaping the whirlwind—he can't sow wild oats without grinding the rocks in his teeth.

Laugh at God as we may, the principle of the balance of tit for tat, of reaping according to our sowing is one of the underlying principles of the whole creation and there is no getting away from it—or getting past it or over it. It must be taken into account. If I were a resident of Richmond I would see to it that unless the regular officieries of Cnotra Costa county saw to it that that sort of moral wreckage and shame ceased along the highways of Contra Costa county, we should begin a species of seeing to it ourselves by electing officials that would do their duty."

SETTLEMENT ON SANTA FE SOON BELIEF HERE

Reports current around Richmond late yesterday were to the effect that the strike on the Santa Fe road which effects a number of local shopmen will be off in the not far distant future.

This seemed to be the opinion of the greater number of the local men when they learned that an agreement has been signed by the Western Pacific and their men and that the men had been ordered back to work this morning. The settlement on the Western Pacific is probably the first to be made between the strikers and any of the western roads.

At a meeting of the local shopmen yesterday it was stated that several other roads are dickering for peace but whether the Santa Fe was one of them was not stated.

Representatives of the Pullman Company are now in conference with the American Federation of Labor and a settlement of difficulties at that plant is expected at any time now.

According to the strikers the condition of the locomotives is becoming steadily worse.

A special meeting will be held by the Silver Thistle Club on Friday evening, September 22, at the home of Mrs. Orthman, 1919 Roosevelt avenue. Important business will be discussed and all members are urged to be in attendance.

PASTOR'S WIFE MENTIONED IN KILLING OF 2

New Brunswick, N. J., Sept. 21.—"I shall not run away. I will remain here until things are cleared up. While these terrible things are being said I shall refuse all invitations to go to other cities."

In this fashion Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, heiress to millions, tonight took cognizance of rumors involving her in the investigation of the double murder last Thursday night of her husband, the Rev. Edward W. Hall, rector of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, his choir leader.

Mrs. Hall made this answer in which have been going the rounds.

This unexpected recognition that she has been seriously mentioned by investigators has veered detectives into a new and sensational channel of inquiry.

They are now working on the theory that jealousy by a third woman, a member of the congregation, may have inspired the double shooting. To determine whether this possibility will hold, they called James Mills, widower of the slain woman and sexton of the church, and subjected him to the third examination he has experienced since the double crime.

Woman Informer Sought

Mills was asked the name of the woman who more than a year ago came to him and "tipped him" that his wife and Hall were more than ordinarily friendly in their church work. He was asked the circumstances of that warning, directed to narrate his meeting with Hall in which he asked the rector for an explanation and told to give the names of other women of the choir and congregation, who, in his opinion, might have been "more than ordinarily friendly" with the clergyman.

As a result of their talk with Mills, the authorities are not only going to question the woman involved, but will quiz every man and woman in the congregation in an effort to determine whether a woman in the church was jealous of the rector's friendship with the choir leader and would have had a motive of jealousy for killing or having them killed.

In an indirect interview with Universal Service through Miss Sally Peters, a friend of the family for many years, Mrs. Hall stressed the theory that the double murder was the result of a holdup, and not committed for revenge.

Strait Bridge Plan Is Endorsed by Realty Board

The project of the San Francisco Transit company to span Carquinez Straits with a suspension bridge 3000 feet long, has received the official endorsement of the Oakland Real Estate Board. The endorsement was embodied in a resolution adopted yesterday at a luncheon of the board members at the Hotel Oakland, following addresses in favor of the proposed bridge by Fred Goodcell, representing the company, and by Thomas J. Murphy, a member of the board.

N. S. G. W. Planning Initiatory Degree

A good attendance marked the weekly meeting of Richmond Parlor No. 27, Native Sons of the Golden West, held last night in Musicians' hall. Plans were made for an initiation to take place on Thursday evening, October 5th. The initiatory degrees will be conferred by District Deputy Garrett of Berkeley.

President Louis E. Davis presided over last night's meeting.

49 Suits of Clothes Add to Mine Mystery

Jackson, Calif., Sept. 21.—Ever since the disaster there have been 48 suits of clothing hanging in the change house at the mine. When the fire broke out, the number of men believed to have been imprisoned was give out as 48.

Subsequently, Superintendent V. S. Gargarini, after counting the missing tags, announced that there were but 47 men in the burning mine.

The failure of the rescue workers to find the body of William Fessel again called attention to the street clothes of the dead miners. A recount showed that there were still 48 suits in the change house where the miners doff their street attire and don their work clothes.

Thus a question has been raised as to whether two or only one body remain unaccounted for.

BOOTLEGGERS, STILL TAKEN IN RAID

According to word received at the sheriff's office at Martinez yesterday afternoon Deputy Sheriffs Dike Joslin and Ralph Harrison and other officers shortly before 2 o'clock arrested four men and seized a still on what is known as the old Captain Hackett place, in the hills three miles from Walnut Creek.

Joslin reported that the four men fled at the officers' approach and that shots were fired over their heads to stop their flight. The still is said to be one of the largest yet seized in the county.

American Legion Installation Tonight

All arrangements have been completed for the installation of officers to be held by Richmond Post No. 12, American Legion, this evening in Bank hall. The committees in charge have worked hard for a number of weeks in preparation for the evening, and all indications point to the event being the most thoroughly enjoyed by the buddies in many months. The officers to be installed are W. A. Vickery, commander; and John E. Smalley and Ruel S. Cross, members of the executive committee.

Morgan Keaton, state adjutant of the Legion, will install W. A. Vickery as commander.

Reports will also be heard from Fred Bergerow and James T. Narbett, Richmond Post's delegates to the state convention recently held at San Jose.

The installation will be followed by an entertainment and a banquet. All ex-service men are cordially invited to attend this evening.

Pittsburg's Street Opening Celebration

Pittsburg will celebrate the opening of her newly paved streets with a big celebration on Saturday night. An elaborate program has been arranged by a committee of prominent citizens, consisting of addresses, band concert, a free street dance and other forms of public amusement.

News items always welcomed by the Record-Herald. Call Richmond 70 any time, day or night.

RESCUE CREW FAILS TO FIND FESSEL'S BODY

Jackson, Sept. 21.—Ten men of the recovery crew of Byron O. Pickard, United States Bureau of Mines, and a party of fifty miners, are searching the deeper levels of the Argonaut mine for the missing body of William Fessel.

Up to sundown no trace of the body had been found.

Mrs. O. H. Wells of Lodi, embalmer, in charge at the Argonaut stamp mill, where all bodies taken from the 4,350 level of the Argonaut have been brought, stated this afternoon that forty-six bodies had been brought to the mill from the mine, and that identification of each and all of these was positive and complete.

The only missing body was that of William Fessel, she said. It was known that one of the missing miner victims wore a ring, and a ring was found on one of the bodies identified. This led to the rumor that Fessel had been identified on top.

Mrs. Wells stated this morning that the ring in question had been positively identified as that of Ernest Miller, whose body was identified beyond all question of doubt.

At the summit of an autumn-browned hill overlooking the pioneer town of Jackson, the mute stamp mill of the Argonaut mine is sacred today. It is the last resting place on top, of the mortal remains of the miners who went down to sleep in the depths of the lode.

The Argonaut stamp mill has therefore been all day a holy mountain up where dusty, boulder-strewn trails have climbed hundreds of friends, relatives and admirers to pay their last respects to the dead. Draped each with an American flag, 46 white caskets stretch in two long lines between the concentrator machines of the big mill. The forty-seventh coffin was still untenanted, while a half hundred miners searched the deeper levels beneath the mill for the missing body of William Fessel.

Funeral Today

The funerals will take place tomorrow. There will be three separate services, at the Protestant, Roman Catholic and Serbian cemeteries.

There will be no ceremonies held in the three churches. Th services will begin at 9 o'clock at the Catholic cemetery. There an altar will be erected and a solemn requiem mass will be celebrated by Rev. Michael J. Kearney, assisted by Rev. Michael O'Connor of Sutter Creek.

The Protestant services will be held at 10 o'clock at the Portestant cemetery and will be in charge of Rev. Edwin F. Brown of the Methodist Episcopal church of Jackson. The Serbian services will be held at the Serbian cemetery at 11 o'lock with Rev.George Kodjitch of the Church of the Holy Trinity of San Francisco officiating.

One Mormon

Evan Ely, one of the miners who lost their lives, belonged to the Mormon church and over his grave the services will be conducted by W. Aird McDonald, presiding elder of the Eastbay section of the Church of the Latter Day Saints. Of the number of men who died there were twenty-five Catholics, nine Protestants and eleven Serbians. Two of the number will be interred privately at Sutter Creek.

The bodies will be transported to the cemeteries and be there before the commencement of the services. Friends, relatives and the public are invited to attend. Relatives will be taken to the cemeteries in automobiles provided by a committee of which William D. Tam, president of the Amador Chamber of Comerce, is the head. Floral tributes are being received at the mill in large numbers.

"More business and less politics. When I become governor I will throw out the political wrecking gang and put a construction crew on the job." —Statement of Friend William Richardson, who has just been nominated by the Republicans for Governor of California.

CHANGES IN PRAYERS

Somebody said the only safe prayer to offer up was for rain; if you kept at it long enough it was bound to be favorably answered. Many persons believe in prayer and have no doubt they are influential with the Almighty. And yet, there are certain pagans who believe that the Lord does what He pleases without reference to our wishes. It is a matter for argument.

The Episcopalians in convention are preparing to make certain changes in the formal prayers, and it is quite all right. When addressing the Creator it is well not to tell Him what He already knows, and it is also proper not to tell Him that "we are sinners all"; for He, be it said, knows that better than we do. Information regarding ourselves may well be deleted and probably will be, thus improving the Book of Common Prayer.

Everyone will be interested in the alteration of the marriage service, which is not only in use by the Episcopalians, but by the Methodists, a strong child of the Church of England. The promise of a woman to "obey" the man she marries has been cut out, and this will meet with approval, for the pledge heretofore given by the woman conflicts with the law. The wife is not required to obey her husband, and she knows it better than he does. The marriage service, however, will continue to use the words placed in the mouth of the bridegroom: "With all my worldly goods I thee endow."

Lawyers in the church and many of the laity urged the deletion of these words. They are retained, meaningless though they are. For a man does not give his wife everything, and even though he pledges himself to do so, the law will uphold him at all times if he refuses to carry out the promise.

KIPLING DENIES IT

It has resolved itself into a question of veracity between Rudyard Kipling and Mrs. Clare Sheridan; she wrote for the newspapers that Kipling said America went into the war too late and that, anyway, America died in 1860, and other things.

Kipling declares that he did not make the statements attributed to him.

We take a middle course and believe he did say America went into the war too late. Most Americans think so, to, and believe that if we had had a Roosevelt or a Cleveland or an Andrew Jackson in the White House when the Lusitania was sunk, instead of a man who was too proud to fight, we would have taken a big hand in the war long before we did.

We believe, however, that Mrs. Sheridan misunderstood Kipling about America dying in 1860. It sounds like the statement of a fool and is meaningless. After that date Lincoln lived and Grant wrought, slaves were freed, the country's population increased three times what it was, and great things happened. America led in the progress of the world after 1860, and showed the way to all others. Kipling knows it and could never have said what he is quoted as saying.

PEON PANTS

Be not alarmed, good people, be not alarmed. "Toreador trousers," with fringes as a substitute for cuffs, are not coming out of Hollywood for adoption in Prescott. These trousers are described as belled at the bottom with slits laced together. For decorative purposes there are bells, fancy buttons, and braids. We do not doubt the truth of the report that the "fad" started with high school boys and we'll say let it end there.

We do not expect to see bells attached to trousers any more than we expect to see bells attached to toes.—Journal-Miner.

Russia, by the way, is now split into 32 nations, all affiliated with the Moscow Soviet. Why doesn't Russia have a league of nations of its own?

THE LIMIT OF THE LAW

A Phoenix officer shot and killed a young man whom he regarded as a violator of a city ordinance.

The parents of the youth are clamoring for the arrest of the policeman. The authorities have decided to leave the matter to the judgment of the grand jury.

During the cantonment period, an officer in a great army camp was instructed by his commanding general to take such steps as he regarded necessary to stop the speeding of automobiles within camp confines. The officer, who had charge of the guards, passed those instructions on to the enlisted men. A night later, a guard shot for the rear tire of a car he had tried to stop and which had nearly run him down. The bullet ricocheted and passed through the heart of an officer riding beside the driver, who was operating a "jitney."

The hue and cry that followed was tremendous. But the army argued along a line of reasoning that may easily be considered analogous to that governing the Phoenix case. In brief, revolvers and ball cartridges had been issued. The soldier reasoned that the loaded revolver had been given him for a purpose.

There was no intent to injure the person of anyone when the shot was fired. The death of the passenger was an incident to the enforcement of a law.

But the real cause of the young man's death at Phoenix the other night can be found in the bottle from which he and his friend had partaken of strong drink before engaging in their swift and fatal ride.

THOMAS A. EDISON

Members of the New York City administration and others who united to honor Thomas A. Edison the other evening honored themselves as well. Mr. Edison may not be the most outstanding figure of all history, but a fairly good argument could be made upon that thesis. What the world would do today without electric lights it is hard to imagine. And yet a knowledge of how to harness electricity is only one of the boons Mr. Edison has given to humanity.

He is a wealthy man, despite his indifference to wealth. It could not well be otherwise; and yet it is interesting to hear him say that when he first sought to capitalize his own genius he didn't put it that way he had in mind the sum of $5,000. The men he consulted thought in larger figures, and asked him if a hundred thousand dollars would do. He thought it would, but begged them to pay him in fifteen yearly installments so he would not waste any of it on "some fool invention." This was less than half a century ago, and look where Edison stands today. His name will live so long as civilization survives.

OVER AT SMYRNA

The results of a campaign between the Greeks and Turks included the surrender of Smyrna to the Turks.

The League of Nations discusses Austrian economics.

The results of the surrender of Smyrna to the Turks included the burning of the city, with a probably exaggerated loss of $60,000,000 worth of property.

The League of Nations considers the abstract justice.

The burning of Smyrna was accompanied by the massacre of—Oh, well—one thousand, two thousand, or perhaps several other odd and inconsequential thousands of human beings.

The League of Nations keeps its eye on the Pan-American state of mind.

Honestly, now, can you blame the American people for doubting the value of the League of Nations? Or its right to exist? Or the simple idiocy of its old claim that it would end such practices as those going on at Smyrna?

UNCLE SAM LOSES BEST LAWYERS

The Government has lost another strong team of lawyers. Edward M. Hyzer has left his post as General Counsel to the Shipping Board, and William G. Wheeler, high in the affairs of the Railroad Administration, has likewise forsaken official duties, and these two eminent lawyers will henceforth be associated in Washington, D. C., in the private practice of their profession.

The return of Messrs. Hyzer and Wheeler to private legal pursuits is an added chapter to the "continued story" which relates the withdrawal of the best lawyers of the country from the public service. The explanation is that the duties are usually burdensome and the scale of compensation too much of a personal sacrifice. Mr. Hyzer was formerly Vice President and General Counsel of the great Chicago & Northwestern railroad system; while Mr. Wheeler was United States District Attorney in Wisconsin for many years before becoming a railroad General Solicitor, and Assistant General Counsel of the Railroad Administration. They have now returned to the lawyer's haven of delight where "the man who first invented work left it unbound and free," and have resumed practice before the Supreme Court, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, the Shipping Board and the Treasury Department, and other administrative branches of the Government.

NEW INSTRUCTOR SECURED BY Y. M. C. A.

A. W. Mueller, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., announces the appointment of Mr. E. P. Howard, as special instructor in restling and boxing for the coming year. Mr. Howard comes to the local association with a wealth of experience and a reputation extending not only throughout the bay region but Northern California as well. Winning the Contra Costa County Amateur Middleweight Wrestling Championship fostered by the Richmond Y. M. C. A. in 1919, and the championship of the Middle Division in the tournament that year at Santa Rosa. Mr. Howard was put on bouts at the Olympic Club and Y. M. C. A. of San Francisco. Representing the San Francisco Y. M C A. in their card with Stanford University, in 1920, Howard defeated the star of the University Squad.

In setting up the physical program or the Y. M. C. A. this year, the same system used by city Y. M. C. A.'s will be used Any man and boy of the Y M C A. age in Richmond may join, but each must be registered and placed in a class best fitted for him, by the physical instructor. At present there will be no charges, but all men and boys interested are asked to register in the office of the general secretary, Macdonald and Seventh street, before Monday evening at 5:30. First classes will be conducted on Monday at 7 o'clock.

FARM TELEPHONES

The number of telephones on farms alone in the United States is much greater than the number of telephones of all kinds, in the cities, towns, and villages and on the farms, in any other country.

The largest type multiple switchboards have more than 2,000,000 tiny soldered parts, 15,000 electrical signal lights and more than 4,000 miles of wire.

Ouch! My Back! Rub Lumbago Pain Away

St. Jacob's Oil stops any pain, so when your back is sore and lame, or lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a small trial botle of old, honest "St. Jacob's Oil" at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub it right on your aching back, and by the time you count fifty, the soreness and lameness is gone.

Don't stay crippled! This soothing, penetrating oil neds to be used only once. It takes the pain right out and ends misery. It is magical, yet absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.

Nothing else stops lumbago, sciatica, backache or rheumatism so promptly. It never disappoints.—Adv.

Feminine Beauty and Cleverness Displayed

Feminine loveliness plus feminine cleverness is much in evidence in "Rich Men's Wives," the new Preferred Picture, filmed under the direction of Gasnier, famous for the excellence of his "Kismet" and other notable creations.

The screen world was searched high and low for actresses who combined the requisite dramatic ability and the physical attractiveness for the chief feminine roles in "Rich Men's Wives," and when the search was ended Claire Windsor, Rosemary Theby, Myrtle Stedman, Carol Holloway and Mildred June— a quintette of the fildom's most beautiful as well as most talented actresses—had affixed their signatures to the dotted line.

No screen production of recent date has demanded so many beautiful as well as so many clever women players as "Rich Mens' Wives," a story of modern society by Frank Dazey and Agnes Christine Johnston, which was prepared for the screen by Lois Zellner. It is a story that holds an especial appeal for women theater-goers and offers unlimited opportunities to the four actresses who interpret the chiefs parts.

Besides this aggregation of feminine pulchritude the cast of "Rich Men's Wives" is noteworthy because of the unusual brilliance of the men of the cast. House Peters heads the cast. Asosciated with him are such fine actors as Gaston Gass, Charles Clary, William Austin and Baby Richard Headrick, the gifted child actor, who achieved no end of film fame in "The Child Thou Gavest Me."

Martha Battox, Carol Halloway and other well known and capable screen players complete the cast.

"Rich Men's Wives" will be shown at the Richmond T. & D. theater, beginning today.

Junior Elks Meet, Plan Dinner Soon

Plans for a banquet to be held in the latter part of October were made by Richmond lodge of Junior Elks at its regular business session last evening in the Elks club rooms. The affair will be open to paid-up members only.

The following committee was appointed to make the preliminary arrangements:

The Junior Elks are planning for a dancing party to be held in the near future. The event is in charge of a committee formed of Paul Heinson, At last night's meeting Cleland Whitton, Cornelius Healey, Al Wilson and Colin Shanks.

At last night's meeting Cleveland Whitton tendered his resignation as secretary. It was accepted by the lodge, which passed a resolution commending the excellent work done by him during the past year.

Edwin Fanning was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Whitton. William Werner acted as secratary last evening.

The remainder of the evening was enjoyably spent in a general social time and was concluded with the serving of refreshments.

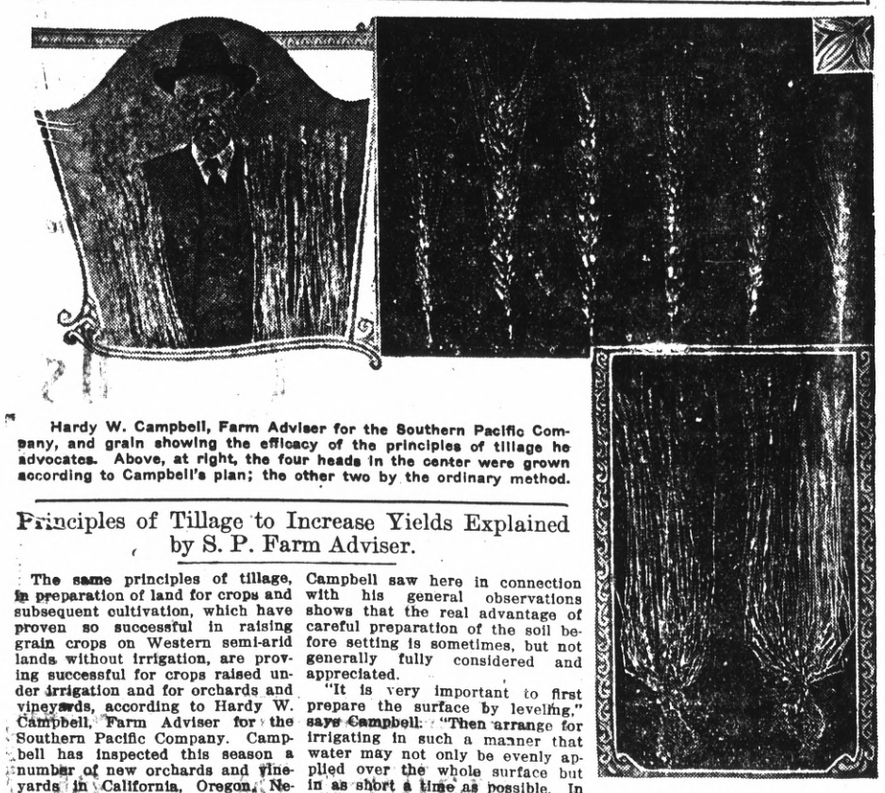
FARM ADVISER AIDS GROWERS



Hardy W. Campbell, Farm Adviser for the Southern Pacific Company, and grain showing the efficacy of the principles of tillage he advocates. Above, at right, the four heads in the center were grown according to Campbell's plan; the other two by the ordinary method.

Principles of Tillage to Increase Yields Explained by S. P. Farm Adviser.

The same principles of tillage, in preparation of land for crops and subsequent cultivation, which have proven so successful in raising grain crops on Western semi-arid lands without irrigation, are proving successful for crops raised under irrigation and for orchards and vineyards, according to Hardy W. Campbell, Farm Adviser for the Southern Pacific Company. Campbell has inspected this season a number of new orchards and vineyards in California, Oregon, Nevada, Arizona, and New Mexico.

Campbell is the man who evolved what is now called the "Campbell System of Dry Farming." Campbell, however, objects to the word "dry" and insists that the principles used in his present plan apply to all kinds of farming, with or without irrigation, as well as under a much lower rainfall than even now is commonly conceded necessary for successful crops. Campbell emphasizes the importance of proper preparation of the seed-bed and sufficient intelligent cultivation afterwards.

Campbell arranged to address the Nebraska Bankers Association at Omaha, September 22 on the subject of "Soil Fertility by Utility of Soil Water," and to discuss the same subject before the Minnesota Bankers' Association at Minneapolis. On his return from these conventions he will stop at Yuma, Arizona, to investigate conditions there.

Interesting evidence of the direct effect of properly prepared lands was recently received by Campbell from a Metropolis, Nevada, grainfield prepared under his direction, in the form of three stools of wheat. One stool had 81 stalks, one 103 and one 120, each the result of one grain of wheat drilled in well prepared soil that was liberally supplied with fertility through well planned and timely work. This crop was raised without irrigation, but was prepared for by summer tillage in 1921 and grown this year.

More evidence of what cultivation of a growing crop means was sent to Campbell by A. B. Shield of Delano, Kern County, California, in four heads of wheat from a stool grown on Shield's ranch. This stool had ample space and was cultivated while growing, no fertilizers or irrigation being used. The stool contained forty-four heads averaging 78 grains each or slightly over 3400 grains from one stool. Such results, says Campbell, simply mean that under certain physical conditions brought about by the right kind of tillage at the proper time, very much more grain, fruit or vegetables may be grown per acre than is commonly obtained. The usual query is "Does it pay?" to which Campbell replies very emphatically in the affirmative.

Campbell recently inspected a number of new orchards and vineyards in the southern and central portions of California to study methods and principles commonly practiced in preparing the land and the after care in irrigation and cultivation. One of these inspections was of a 4000 acre peach orchard of one, two and three-year-old trees belonging to the California Packing Corporation and located east of Merced, Calif. What Campbell saw here in connection with his general observations shows that the real advantage of careful preparation of the soil before setting is sometimes, but not generally fully considered and appreciated.

"It is very important to first prepare the surface by leveling," says Campbell. "Then arrange for irrigating in such a manner that water may not only be evenly applied over the whole surface but in as short a time as possible. In other words establish an even surface with reasonably short laterals. Too much water in the soil beneath some trees or too little for others is detrimental usually. Again, the lower places, especially in heavy soils, gather more water, keeping the surface wet longer and frequently delaying timely cultivation, and not infrequently causing the higher spots to lose much of its already short supply. When the trees or vines reach the bearing period, the profit is increased or decreased in both quantity and quality of the crop. Both of these results are governed by the amount of fertility resulting from soil condition in which the per cent of moisture and air carried therein, especially during the warmer weather, is a big factor. The ability to supply this desired moisture in proper quantities the entire season through each year, is the first consideration.

"The next question is the perfect root bed. This should be supplied liberally with available plant food evenly distributed, so that when the trees or vines are set, there is a condition so favorable that not only the weaker sets may quickly take root and grow vigorously, instead of withering and dying, but a healthy, uniform growth may be obtained the first year, which means much to the early and annual fruitage of the trees or vines.

"To achieve this result, after leveling, the field should be cultivated practically an entire season before setting to trees or vines, with only sufficient irrigation to assist in establishing the ideal root bed which should be both fine and fairly firm from the very start. The object is to continually carry the proper quantity of both air and water through the heated part of the season. Under this condition, with the high percentage of moisture held at the top of the firm soil, through careful and timely cultivation, there will be a liberal development and growth of that most desirable soil bacteria. This procedure increases the much needed plant food more evenly in all parts of the field, before setting, than can possibly be developed after setting. This gives an advantage not otherwise obtainable.

"Much can be said of irrigation and cultivation after setting, but to be brief, care should be taken not to over-irrigate, for to obtain the best results, the soil in and about the root zone must be moist but not wet. When the soil is saturated there is practically no healthy growth. As a rule cultivation is not only insufficiently frequent but too often is so untimely as to be of little value.

"There are certain conditions of moisture in the soil following irrigation, the same as following a rain, when the high value of cultivation to the final crop is very much greater. These conditions must be considered. Nothing can prove this more convincingly than the soil auger.

"It is very desirable, so far as possible, to not only carry the high percentage of moisture at the top of the firm soil, immediately below the mulch, but also to induce free access of air throughout the entire growing season. The ideal condition to furnish this air is to cover the firm soil with a granular mulch, neither too fine nor too coarse. To obtain this ideal mulch, the cultivation must be done when the soil is moist—not wet or dry. The loosened soil soon dries, leaving the firm soil moist to the top. This is usually easy to obtain in sandy soils, but to do this properly in heavy soils it is sometimes necessary to go over the field a second time, after first going over just enough to loosen the top when the surface is simply dry enough not to stick. This prevents the crusting or drying out. Then the second operation should come one to four days later, after the free water has gone down, leaving the soil moist, when it more readily separates, and makes a finer and much more effective mulch. This procedure means much to the tree, as a higher precentage of moisture is held in the root zone and a crusting and cloddy mulch is prevented.

"The high value of this plan of preparation and one season's cultivation before the setting of the trees or vines, is borne out by the interesting results obtained from careful summer tilling for wheat, oats and barley, and the preciseness of time in doing this work is just as vital. There are numerous records of large yields of wheat as high as 40 to 60 bushels per acre, grown on correctly summer tilled land, where nearby fields, prepared and sowed under the more common plan of 'any old way,' yielded very poorly or nothing at all."

The Southern Pacific Land Department "Bulletin No. 10" deals quite explicitly with questions of increased fertility by tillage. Bulletin No. 12 also explains in detail the summer tilling question as applied to the coast country. One or both may be obtained without cost by letter or personal application to Hardy W. Campbell, 981 Southern Pacific Building, San Francisco. A Bulletin is now under way dealing with tillage and irrigation of orchards and vineyards.

Campbell's greatest pleasure is to visit a farm or ranch where the proprietor or manager feels he is not getting satisfactory returns and work out, as far as possible, a practical remedy. The Southern Pacific follows the theory that its interests are tied up with the territory it serves, and Campbell and the Company wish to be helpful in increasing agricultural productivity.

Kids Newlywed About Bride's Cooking

"Well, Jim, how goes married life by now? You've been back from the honeymoon about two weeks, haven't you? Time for you to be having acute pains from your wife's biscuits, isn't it?"

"Well, according to the comics, yes. But it so happens that my wife is some cook, if I do say it. By golly, her biscuits fairly melt in a man's mouth."

"Oh, here, now. You're just trying to kid me. I dont' blame you for sticking up for the wife, though."

"Kid you nothing! Just to prove what a good cook she is, I want you to come up to the apartment for dinner next Sunday. That's the best way to show you."

"You've not been married long enough to know that the ladies don't like their hubbies to invite folks to dinner without consulting them."

"Say, my wife's an angel, I tell you, and, besides, she told me to ask you out soon. We'll have a chicken dinner and dumplings. I can promise you that. And we'll have a fine pie."

"Well, that's too much for me. I'll be there. Good chance for me to creak in my new suit, too. Say, boy, I found the best place to buy clothes—Cherry's, at 528 Thirteenth street. New fall styles just in, and they give a fellow six months to pay."

"Don't tell me about Cherry's. That's where I got all my wedding finery. I have been buying there for four years."

This Will Interest Stomach Sufferers

Says Indigestion comes from an excess of hydrochloric acid

acid stomach—and not, as most are nearly always due to acidity—

A well-known authority states that stomach trouble and indigestion folks believe, from a lack of digestive juices. He states that an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach retards digestion and starts food fermentation, then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy baloon. We then get that heavy, lumpy feeling in the chest, we eructate sour food, belch gas, or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash, or nausea.

He tessl us to lay aside all digestive aids and insetead get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for one week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is mad from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.—Adv.

Sage and Sulphur Darkens Gray Hair

Brush this through faded, streaked locks and they become dark, Glossy, Youthful

Almost every one knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago, the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle by asking at any drug store for, of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two your hair become beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

DECISION IS AWAITED IN DAMAGE SUIT

Holding court on the highway near Giant yesterday afternoon Superior Judge R. H. Latimer heard the conclusion of evidence in siut for $56,000 damages instituted by Mike George and Joaquin Rosa against S. C. Rogers, William De Land and George Dutra. The two plaintiffs had legs broken in an automobile accident, injury to Rosa's left leg being so serious as to necessitate amputation. He is asking $40,000 damages. The plaintiffs claim that they were riding on Rogers' truck at his solicitation. A machine driven by Dutra and owned by De Land, they say, was closely following Rogers' machine. Rogers, they allege, stopped his car quickly and that De Land's car crashed into it. The case was submitted to Judge Latimer for decision.

Women the Greatest Buyers in the World

There are 22,000,000 homes in the United States. The women who buy for these homes spend on the average $500 each, or a total of $11,000,000,000, each year. That is more than $36,000,000 every working day. Every year it amounts to half as much as America's Liberty Bond issue.

Each woman is a part of this army of buyers, and each, if she will, may be guided to wise and economical purchases if she will but make up her mind each day to read as many as she can of the advertisements which manufacturers are printing for her benefit.

The advertising in every newspaper and every magazine is a buying guide for this greatest buying force in the world. This advertising makes it safe and easy for every member of this buying army to make her purchases.

It establishes in her mind a buying habit and gives her a preference of one brand of goods to another or an advertised article to one that is unknown.

It identifies for her a certain product as being standard, so that she may easily dodge the wiles of sellers who try to sell something that is not so good.

It fixes merit as an everlasting adjunct to certain articles.

It makes her know that the manufacturer who is proud of his product and jealous of his reputation and character cannot do otherwise than make his product at least as good as he says it is.

More than likely it is better.

Advertising points out where this greatest buyer in the world's history may find quality goods by showing her pictures of them over and over again which enables her to recognize them easily and quickly.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—The time is the late '60s or early '70s and the scene a steamboat on the Mississippi river. All the types of the period are present and the floating palace is distinguished by merriment, dancing and gallantry. There are the customary drinking and gambling also. Virgil Drace, a young northern man, is on his way south on a mission of revenge. He meets an eccentric character in the person of one Liberty Shottle, who is constantly tempting the goddess of chance. They form a singular compact.

CHAPTER II.—Drace gets his mind off his mission by entering into deck sports in which he exhibits an unusual athletic prowess. Liberty Shottle is again unlucky at cards and attempts a financial negotiation with Drace. The latter, seeing an opportunity to use Shottle, confides to him that his mission is to find a certain ex-guerrilla, Stepho la Vitte, who had murdered Drace's father. It is his determination announced to his new chum, to hang La Vitte as high as Haman. Drace has become enamored of a mysterious beauty aboard the boat.

CHAPTER III.—The steamer reaches New Orleans, at that time in the somewhat turbulent throes of carpetbag government. Shottle becomes possessed of two tickets for the French ball, a great society event, and proposes that Drace accompany him to the affair. The young men attend and Drace unexpectedly meets the girl who had fired his heart aboard the steamer. She is accompanied by one Boyce, whose proprietary interest indicates that he is her fiance. Through stratagem Shottle learns that the name of the girl is Nadine la Vitte and that her companion of the evening is the man who is seeking to marry her.

CHAPTER IV.—Drace passes an uneasy night torn by the suspicion that Nadine is the daughter of old Stepho la Vitte, now an admitted outlaw. Now, more than ever, is he resolved to find where the girl lives and to find Stepho. Drace and Shottle begin a search of the city. In one of their nocturnal pilgrimages they come upon a mob intent upon hanging a poor wretch from the limb of a tree. It is a typical carpetbag execution and aroused the resentment of an opposing mob of citizens. Drace takes a hand in the fight which starts and is instrumental in preventing the execution. From a window opposite the scene, he catches a glimpse of one he is sure is Nadine.

CHAPTER V.—The escapade, the fight, the interference with the execution get Drace and Shottle into bad standing with the authorities, but instead of punishment are given until the next day to board a steamer bound north. Returning to the house where he thought he had glimpsed the girl, Drace finds the place abandoned. Through Colonel Josh, an emissary employed at the suggestion of Shottle, he gets a faint clue in the discovery that a certain Frenchman, a wine dealer, is reported to be an intimate of Stepho la Vitte. There is only a short time before the departure of the steamer when Drace and Shottle go to call on the Frenchman. The latter is too keen to be inveigled into giving up any information, but Shottle, spying around among the casks and bottles, especially the articles made up for shipment, makes an important discovery. So as not to arouse the suspicions of the Frenchman, he casually draws Drace away from the place and onto the steamer. On board he informs Drace that one of the cases was addressed to Stepho la Vitte at Farnum's Landing, Mississippi. It is the next stop below Bethpage's Landing and Colonel Bethpage is Liberty Shottle's uncle.

CHAPTER VI.—Drace and Shottle are received with genuine hospitality by Colonel Bethpage and find the plantation and its environs delightful. After a brief stay and a characteristic financial transaction with the colonel, Shottle goes away ostensibly on a business trip to Vicksburg, but in reality to seek his favorite form of amusement. Drace makes the plantation his headquarters and from pieces of information gathered from various sources, becomes convinced that La Vitte has a haunt in a great wood of cypress and a tangle of salt cedar, a sort of everglades, a marsh with hundreds of knoll islands rising here and there among the bayous. A shrewd old negro had told him that the outlaw lived in a house built of periwinkle shells. Day after day Drace takes a canoe and goes farther and farther into the moss-hanging wilds. At his feet lies a rope, one end of it a hangman's noose.

CHAPTER VII.— Drace penetrates into the wilderness, discovers Periwinkle House and finds Nadine alone. She is much alarmed and warns him her father will shoot him. He makes love to her and to get him to go she agrees to meet him again the following Thursday. On his way home Drace is accosted by three men who ask to be set across the river. They overpower him and bind him with ropes. Led by Tony they throw Drace into an old cabin. Tony taunts Drace and avows his love for Nadine, while the others collect fuel. Tony sets fire to the cabin and the three go off laughing. And then his bonds are cut and with Nadine's help he gets safely out. She tells him how she was led to come to his rescue.

CHAPTER VIII.—Drace gets safely back to the Bethpage place. The general writes him to accompany him to Natchez, where he is to address a teachers' meeting. At Natchez they go to old Tobe Mason's tavern, under the hill, a famous place. There they drink summer-grape wine, listen to "The Arkansaw Traveler," see the buck-and-wing dancers and have a dinner of doves and fr-in's. Stepho la Vitte appears, insults the General by calling him a "Carpet-bagger." The General tells him he lies. Stepho draws a dirk. Drace disarms Stepho, who leaves, vowing vengeance.

CHAPTER IX.—On the Thursday morning of the appointment between Drace and Nadine, Stepho informs the girl that they are soon going to Memphis, where she is to be married to Boyce. She protests, to no avail. Drace comes at evening and makes warm love to her.

It was a long way to his canoe near the Muscadine isle, and then a long pull to Periwinkle house, but there was time enough. Stepho would not go away till Thursday. Ah, he would go away no more, for now on Tuesday he must settle with the spirit of Alfred Drace.

Mists hovered about, but the island was in a blaze of light. Silently the canoe slit the satin water. Silently he landed. Determined vengeance may pick its way as softly as eager love; and in the cane, sharper of whisper now that the weather was cool, he made not a sound. Out into the open he peered. No one within sight. On the bark of the live oak were the dead flowers of yesterday. There in the shade was the box that had served as table, once so prettily strewn with violets.

In spite of his vow of vengeance and his hatred of Stepho, these things caught at Drace's heart, shook his fixed purpose of action. For many minutes he waited—no sign of Stepho, of anyone. And then his blood leaped; for soft hands suddenly blinded him from behind, soft laughter bubbled over at his astonishment. And dark thoughts and dark purposes fled on the wind as he caught Nadine and hugged her close.

"Now for your punishment!" And he kissed her.

"Oh, you must not again . . . Virgil, I cannot like you when you are rude. . . . You must not!"

"I don't want you just to like me."

"You do not? Then I will try not to. . . . Come and sit down, Virgil. You worked so hard for your kisses you must be tired. . . . How did you guess?"

"Guess what?" he asked as she led him to the sofa and he sat gazing entranced as she captured and imprisoned her guerrilla bands of hair.

"Tint Father and Tony had gone hunting today. But they may be back at any time, Virgil. You must not stay."

"But I must stay; you hold me prisoner. I must stay until you love me as madly as I do you."

"As madly as you do me? That might not be so much mad, Virgil. But why should I love you?"

"Because you are to be my wife. We are engaged."

"Are we? I did not know that. Why you not tell me sooner?"

"I did, and now you must know it."

"But I did not. Then I must be stupid, yes?"

"The whole universe is stupid if it denies it. The angels are stupid if they fail to see it."

'Oh, you must not talk like that. It is worse than swearing the big oath. . . . And I am to be your wife, Mrs. Virgil? Then what do we do? Go about and sing with the fiddle?"

"No, we go to the beautiful places on earth and look upon them—together. We—"

"No, no, you must not think like that. You take my father by the wrist and he hate you. . . . And I do so wrong to see you. I am the sinner, but I believe that the Blessed One, she ask for my forgiveness. . . . No, Virgil, we can only play together and then . . . It will live in the mind, our childhood here. . . . My father is not well all the time now, and I must be good to him. . . . Only I must see you, sometimes. That is the only wrong I do him.

"For I—I love you. . . . I did not want to tell you, but I cannot keep it all the time down in my heart. . . . I dream of you all of the night, and I kneel down and pray that you always love me. . . . There, I have told you so much. And I kiss you, too. . . . Now—you may stay for a little time, and then you must go."

Boy and girl they played, not from the book but from love's ever-varying text. In his canoe they paddled afar off where the lily-pads paved the surface of the pond. They landed on a knoll where was spread over persimmon saplings an arbor of muscadine; here an adventurous catbird had her nest of young. She cried and fluttered about in great alarm, but when she saw that they were not her enemies, that they caught grasshoppers to feed her brood, she sat high among the vines, calling her mate, the musician, and here he came, scared at first, but when she had explained to him he sang his medley, ending with the catcall whence comes his unpoetic name.

The sun had been speeding, and went behind a cloud. Fear seized Nadine, and taking Virgil's hand, she urged him toward the boat.

"My dear one, we must go now. The sun was jealous that we so happy and will go into the dark to pout. . . . I will show you the near way for you to come again, the way I came when there was the fire. You can leave the canoe in the rushes and you will need it only to cross over to the cane. But we must hurry now."

In the rushes opposite the island he hid his canoe, and then she conducted him along a narrow and sometimes treacherous trail. Coming to the foot-log, she halted.

"I must leave you here. But I stand for two minutes. The sun he will wink a few more times. . . . I am so glad now to know that I will be your wife. And I am strong and can work."

"Lord bless you, but you won't have to work."

His arms were about her, her cheek against his, and with happiness the world was glowing.

"Till Thursday!" he cried as he dipped his paddle.

"Till Thursday!" she echoed as she watched him go.

"Till Thursday!" muttered the sinister voice of old Stepho, who had approached softly through the undergrowth at the sound of voices, and had overheard their parting. But when he came to Periwinkle house, he gave no sign to Nadine that he had overheard—only talked of Monsieur Boyce and the fine dresses he would buy for her when she was his wife.

It was long past noon when Drace reached the river.

The General had gone over into another parish to attend a stock sale. Tycie said; and when she had looked at Drace more closely, at his torn clothes, his muddy shoes, she sighed and sat down beside him where on the rustic bench he had dropped to rest before going to his room.

"Virgil," she said, "there is something troubling you. Now, you needn't tell me that it is business. I know what business is. I know all of its tricks; but I also know love and all of its tricks. Virgil, you are in love. Let me hope that it is not that Nina Spence. She isn't worthy of you; and besides, she doesn't belong to us. She is not of our world. Virgil, I am so sorry."

She put her hand on his arm, and he took it and affectionately kissed it.

"Aunt Tycie, I never saw the girl you speak of. I am in the—the throes, you might say, and have been—was before I got here, but not with her."

"But is it with anyone I know?"

"You have seen her, I have heard."

"Oh, you must tell me. It shall be sacred with me. If you only knew how people tell me their affairs of the heart. Even old Colonel Josh has told me. Now, why won't you?"

"I shall tell you, but I must put you on your honor. I said that you have seen her. You have; you spoke of her. Nadine—"

"Oh, Virgil! But her father!"

"Yes, I know. But let me tell you my story.

He told of his love, not of his father's death—told her nothing of his oath; she listened enraptured; and when he had finished, she mothered him with her arms about his neck.

About ten o'clock next day, while the family sat in the shade, up to the gate drew a resplendent carriage, drawn by two black horses and driven by a negro in livery. Out stepped a man as tall as Lincoln and wearing a hat as high as his. His raiment flashed like the varnish of his equipage. Drace recognized him as he came through the gate, taking off his gloves, and the General cried out:

"Tycie, I wish I may die dead if it isn't Liberty Shottle!"

"Colonel Shottle, at your service," replied Liberty, bowing and gesturing with his gloves in his hand.

"Well, Liberty!" cried his aunt, giving him a hug of welcome.

The General and Drace grasped him, stroked his velvety raiment, urging him to a seat.

"Why all this, Colonel Shottle?"—from the General. "You don't mean to tell me that you have sold your jute-stock?"

"Uncle Howard, sir, first issue orders to have my carriage stored, my horses stabled and my driver quartered, please."

The order was issued, and they sat waiting for Shottle to explain his transformation.

"A simple story," he began, stretching out his legs. "But do not forestall me. Poker, dice, roulette, faro, hazard—all of them failed."

"And this comes of legitimate investment!" Tycie cried. "I knew it would. Oh, I knew it just had to come. Now tell us about it.

"It was an investment, Aunt Tycie. But let me not forestall myself. I left here on a boat, got broke. Finally I reached Tampa, Florida."

"Away down there, Liberty?"—from Tycie.

"Patience, my dear aunt. Tampa, and broke! After a day of hope with its throat cut from ear to ear, I got on a boat bound for Havana. The Spanish captain gave me passage for service. He was studying English, and I agreed to explain to him certain niceties of our mother tongue, you understand; and I am sure that, reaching port, he knew more about gambling terms than he could have picked up in a year of close study in one of our ordinary schools. He was appreciative, generous, and gave me a bonus of five dollars. I went to a hotel, not of the first class, and it was there that I made my investment. The weather was warm and—"

"For gracious sake, Liberty, tell us!" his aunt urged him.

"That is my aim, but let us not be impetuous. . . . I was eating a Spanish stew out on the sidewalk, the weather being warm, when along came an agent—not a man in distress, but a regular agent—and I invested with him. I bought a ticket in the Havana lottery. . . . Wait, now. Nothing ever happens until it does, you know. The drawing came off two days later, and my number, 356,792, won the first prize, twenty thousand in gold."

Tycie hugged him; Drace shook his hand; and the General exclaimed his astonishment.

"Well, that beats anything I ever heard in my life. It doesn't seem possible, sir."

"No, and I was somewhat taken by surprise, Uncle Howard. But there is often success in a change of occupation, and I had tried everything else. It took me a few moments to adjust myself; then I got a draft, and in Mobile received premium enough on my gold certificate to pay my debts. And now it gives me great pleasure to perform that duty. I owe you, Uncle Howard, twelve hundred and thirty dollars, all told. Aunt Tycie, I owe you five hundred. Virgil, I owe you—but we'll get at that later. Worthy and patient creditors, here we are!"

He took out a roll of bank notes, counted the amount of his indebtedness to his aunt and showered her lap with greenbacks. Then he turned to the General.

"No, Liberty, I don't want the money," protested Bethpage. "If you pay me, it will be the first time you ever returned borrowed money to me, and I don't care to have you establish a precedent that might bring disappointment in the future."

After the family bedtime, Shottle came into Drace's room and requested him to report as to what progress he had made; and Drace told him all that had occurred.

"And now let me tell you a notion of mine," said Shottle then. "If you are waiting for that old sharkbone to decay, you'll perhaps wait twenty years. Attention: I'm going on a little trip tomorrow. In two days, when I come back, I'll drive down to a convenient point; you fetch the girl, into the carriage you jump, and away we go, drive over to some place where we can catch a train, and Cincinnati before old Stepho knows which way we've gone. What do you say?"

"But—what becomes of my oath? Oh, don't think that because I daily I have forgotten it or that in one jot I shall fail to keep it. If I should, in all after-life I'd have a contempt for myself."

CHAPTER XI

"Till Thursday!" Drace had cried. Nadine had echoed it, and another voice, hidden in the cane, had muttered the words with how different a meaning! Now Thursday was come again; and Virgil Drace infirm of purpose, again made his way down the river and through the swamp to his tryst with Nadine.

But Death sought to make a third at that tryst. From afar the sentineled Tony had seen Drace coming.

And Hardly Had the Northerner's Canoe Touched the Bank When From Out the Canoe Tony and Stepho Leaped Upon Him.

And hardly had the Northerner's canoe touched the bank when from out the cane Tony and Stepho leaped upon him and bore him to the ground, dazed by a blow from an oar.

Broadcast Bill's Radiolays

The "Ladies Foreign Missions" had a big bazaar last week an' folks came in from Canton, London Mills, an' Quiver Creek. We had a lot of booths an' things where you could spend your money; those Thompson girls told fortunes, an' I tell you it was funny to see them young chaps crowd 'round a fightin' fer their turn, so Lil or Beth could read their palms, I watched their faces burn as Beth would take their calloused paws into her dainty hands an' tell them of some future trip they'd make to d'stant lands, or with her finger gently trace the lines uv life an' heart—them girls know the system an' I'll say they act the part. Sis Perkins sold refreshments, ice-cream cones an' home-made cakes, some angels-foods an' brown-stone fronts, the kind yer mother makes. Then, there wuz several other booths; we had some movin' pictures, Abe run a sody fountain where he stirred up fancy mixtures. But what I started out to tell wuz my part in the show—"Step right this way my good friends, hear the wondrous Radio." The folks around this country here has heard about my set, but there wuz lots an' lots of them that hadn't heard it yet. An' when I learned that they wuz goin' to have this here bazaar, I sez to Min,, "Let's show 'em all how up to date we are." So Min an' me made up some signs an' strung up the wires, connected up the set an' horn an' both my amplifiers. You should a heard my line of talk—"It cost you but a dime, the concert's starting to commence—come on, you're just in time." While I kept up the chatter Min "tuned in" a sending station; I told the crowd here wuz a chance to hear the whole creation. The music of the twinkling stars can't any ways compare to what you get by Radio what comes from everywhere. Well, gosh, we made more money, heaps, than any of the rest an "everybody said our entertainment wuz the best.

RED PEPPER FOR COLDS IN CHEST

Ease your tight, aching chest. Stop the pain. Break up the congestion. Feel a bad cold loosen up in just a short time.

"Red Pepper Rub" is the old remedy that brings quickest relief. It cannot hurt you and it certainly seems to end the tightness and drive the congestion and soreness right out.

Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red pepper, and when heat penetrates right down into colds, congestion, aching muscles and sore, stiff joints relief comes at once.

The moment you apply Red Pepper Rub you feel the tingling heat. In three minutes the congested spot is warmed through and through. When you are suffering from cold, rheumatism, backache, stiff neck or sore muscles, just get a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub, made from red peppers, at any drug store. You will have the quickest relief known—Adv.

Sulphur Clears A Pimply Skin

Apply Sulphur as Told When Your Skin Breaks Out.

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms or body overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declare a noted skin specialist.

Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar of Mentho-Sulphur and use it like cold cream.

Some drivers of cars not equipped with Willard Batteries think they ought to go to the service station that sold the battery. Not at all!

The safest rule is to go to the place that gives you the best attention, has the most skilled workmen and seems to be most on the job—the place that deserves the title of "Battery Headquarters".

That's the kind of battery station we have always run and always expect to run.

THREE COMPOSERS STUDIED AT MEETING YESTERDAY

A study of the lives of several great composers featured the meeting of Club Mendelssohn, held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Lee Dicely, 49 Idaho avenue. As an introduction to the musical program that followed, Mrs. Joseph Eaton read the lives of the famous composers, Massenet, Liddle and Coleridge-Taylor. The musical program follows:

Piano solo, Selection from "Thais," by Massenet—Mrs. Lee Dicely.

Vocal solos, "Open Thou Thy Blue Eyes," and "In My Garden," by Liddle, Mrs. Slosilo, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. St. John.

The program was followed by a social hour and the serving of delicious refreshments by the hostess. In the absence of Mrs. Clinton Smith, president, who was ill, the meeting was presided over by Mrs. R. G. Lee.

The next meeting will be held on Thursday afternoon, October 5, at the home of Mrs. R. G. Huston, 609 Sixth seets. Mrs. Huston will be assisted in entertaining by Mrs. H. Rumill. The meeting will be of a historiacl nature and will include a discussion on "California Landmarks," by Mrs. H. H. Turley.

HOME CLUB WILL BE ENTERTAINED BY MRS. COIL

Mrs. S. S. Coil will be hostess to the members of the Home Club on next Friday afternoon, September 29, at her home. This will be the club's second meeting of the new term and an enjoyable program for the day is being arranged.

MEETING PLANS BASKET BALL TEAM AT POINT

At a meeting held this week the members of the Point Richmond Athletic Club developed plans for the immediate formation of basketball team. Since a number of the boys are stars on the high school quintets a strong taem should be formed. It is planned to play games with the First National Bank, Crockett, Martinez and Pinole. The first game will be played in the first week in November.

BOY SCOUTS WILL MEET TONIGHT

All members of Troops 1 and 2, Boy Scouts of the West Side, are urged to attend the meeting to be held this evening at the scout headquarters in Firemen's hall. The boys have just started the work for the new year and there are a number of changes in the organization of the troops and patrols that must be made as soon as possible. Scoutmaster George announces that as soon as this work is completed officers for the new year will be elected.

Part-Timers Will Play High School

The members of the part-time school tennis team are practicing hard in preparation for a series of matches which they hope to stage with the Richmond high school team in the near future.

The part-time students are unable to compete with the regular high school students in such sports as football and basketball because of the limited time in which they attend school, but are confident of defeating Richmond Hi in the net game.

Since the part-time boys are barred from many of the major sports because of their outside work, it would be a fine thing if they could get together with the high school in a series of tennis matches.

Registration of Minors October 2

The week of October 2 has been set for the annual registration period of all children from 3 to 18 years of age. The law requires all parents to register the ages of their children at the nearest schoolhouse. Pupils of high school age will also register at the grammar schools.

Taxpayers Must Make Claim to Get Refund

The following statement has been issued by the Collector of Internal Revenue, John P. McLaughlin, relative to recent decisions in the Supreme Court of the United States in the cases of the Union Trust Company et al., executors, versus Wardell, Collector, and Shwab, executor, versus, Doyle, Collector, the statement was published that it would not be necessary for estates to file claims for refunds to which they were entitled under such decisions.

The existing regulations provide for the refunding of estate taxes only upon the filing of a claim therefor by the taxpayer. It will therefore be necessary for all taxpayers who are entitled to a refund af estate taxes by reason of the above entitled decisions to make formal claim therefor on Form 843 which claim should be filed with the Collector of the District wherein the tax was paid for transmittal to the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for appropriate action.

Section 3228, Revised Statutes, as amended by Section 316, of the Revenue Act of 1921, provides that all claims for the refunding or crediting of any Internal Revenue tax alleged to have been erroneously or illegally assessed or collected must be presented to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue within four years next after payment of such tax. Consequently, estate taxes affected by the above decisions can only be refunded provided a claim therefor is filed within four years next after the payment of such taxes.

Chances at Million as Good Today as Ever

"I believe a man has as much chance of making a million today as he had in the days of our fathers," said William Farnum during the filming of his latest William Fox picture "Shackles of Gold," now being shown at the Macdonald theater. The question came up because Farnum, in the play, rises from work as a dock laborer to be a man of millions.

"Take the case in hand," he continued. "A dock laborer. There are many dock laborers of fine mentality, and if such a one became familiar with oil or other stocks he might amass a million. True, he might need the help of a man of money in the beginning, but once started he could do wonders.

"Of course, the difficulty comes after he has amassed his million. Men don't act the same when they have a million as they did when they were poor. It's only natural. Hundreds of women will be ready to marry him for his million, but usually he will want to pick from a class that knows the comforts money brings. That's the rub in life.? That's the rub in this play. Henri Bernstein, who wrote 'Samson,' on which 'Shackles of Gold' is based, knew life as it is. His characer drawing in this play, is, as I believe it should be.

"But don't let any one tell you that the 'good old days' are gone. They're still here—for those who will make use of them."

CREAM CLEARS A STUFFED-UP HEAD

Instantly Opens Every Air Passage—Clears Throat Too.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed because of nasty catarrah or a cold, apply a little pure, antiseptic cream into your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage, soothing and healing swollen, inflamed membranes and you get instant relief.

Try this. Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Your clogged nostrils open right up; your head is clear; no more hawking or snuffling. Count fifty. All the stuffiness, dryness, struggling for breath is gone. You feel fine.

TREASURY NOTES INTEREST RATE IS REDUCED

Word just sent out by the treasury department of the United States announces that a change has been made in regards to the treasury certificates being offered to the public.

The current issue of 4½ per cent United States Treasury Savings Certificates ($25 for $20, $100 for $80, $1000 for $800) was first placed on sale Decemer 15, 1921, and since that date certificates up to about $115,000,000 (maturity value) per month, and there is every evidence that these certificates have proven increasingly attractive to investors. With sales satisfactorily established on a going basis and with the improvement that has taken place in the investment markets, the time has come to readjust the interest basis on which the certificates are sold. The treasury has accordingly decided to make the increase in price recently announced, thereby reducing the interest rate to a basis of 4 per cent. At the new price ($25 for $20.50, $100 for $82, $1000 for $820) the certificates should continue to be highly attractive to investors, particularly small investors who desire to save systematically. The treasury, therefore, looks forward with confidence to the continued co-operation of all helpful agencies in promoting their sale.

Apart form this change in price the new 4 per cent certificates will correspond in all essential respects to the 4½ per cent certificates now on sale. Each certificate matures five years from the date of its issue, but may be redeemed at the option of the holder at any time after issue, at the value indicated on the back of the certificate, equal to the price paid for it plus simple interest of about 3 per cent per annum for the period held. The certificates are issued only in registered form to afford protection against loss and theft, and are exempt from the normal Federal Income tax and from all State and local taxation except estate or inheritance taxes.

All three denominations of Treasury Savings Certificates ($25, $100, $1000) may be purchased at Post Offices and at Federal Reserve Banks, and from or through most other banking institutions.

Morning Lameness

If you are lame every morning, and suffer urinary ills, there must be a cause. Often its weak kidneys. To strengthen the weakened kidneys and avert more serious troubles, use Doans' Kidney Pills. You can rely on Richmond testimony.

Mrs. G. Schiltz, 1309 Bissell ave., Richmond, says: "I suffered from the effects of kidney trouble a few years ago. I had a constant lame back and when I was hanging up clothes, unusual sharp pains caught me in the small of my back. These pains nearly doubled me up. I awoke mornings feeling more tired than when I went to bed. I suffered from pains in the back of my head and dizzy spells. Another member of my family told me about Doan's Kidney Pills and I used two boxes. They gave me great relief and helped me in every way." (Statement given June 1, 1916.

On January 23, 1920, Mrs. Schiltz added: "My faith in Doan's Kidney Pills is as strong as ever. I use them at times, when my kidneys trouble me and they never fail to do good."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Schiltz had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

District Deputy President at Meet

District Deputy President Minnie Whittenberger and District Deputy Marshal Eva Standish, both of Crockett, paid an official visit to Richmond Rebekah Lodge No. 206, at its weekly session last evening in Bank hall. Both visitors made interesting talks for the good of the order and received a warm reception from the lodge.

Following the meeting, which was presided over by Noble Grand Amy Pearson, the assemblage repaired to the banquet room, where an elaborate banquet was served. As a surprise feature of the evening Mrs. Amy Pearson was presented with a large wedding cake and a beautiful cyclamen in honor of her birthday anniversary. The presentation was made by Mrs. Barbara Andeson.

The following program was given during the course of the evening:

Selections—Miss Vera Hogues' orchestra.

Vocal solo—Mrs. Nellie McCauley and Mrs. Barbara Anderson, accompanied by Mrs. Van.

Readings—Miss Margaret Shea.

The committee in charge of the evening's entertainment was composed of Mrs. Effie Reynolds, chairman; assisted by Mesdames Lorence Wilson, Nellie Wagel, Bargara Anderson, Weiler, Winters, Pansy Youd, Cora Rodgers, E. Redmond, Mary Reisen, Amy Freeman, J. Andrews, Clarenbach, Erler, Reifschneider and Stenmark.

Community Social Club to Dance Friday

The local dance public is eagerly looking forward to the dancing party to be given by the Community Club on Friday evening, October 13, in the Richmond club house. The club is a newly formed organization but promises to entertain with some unforgettable parties during the year.

The music will be of the highest order, Chick Barry's orchestra having been secured for the occasion. Chick's collection of incomparable jazz artists—long the most popular in the East-bay district—is this year better than ever, and is unable to fill the many engagements that are being offered.

The dance devotees will be treated to some novel and unique decorative effects that promise to outdo any seen at the club house during the past year. J. F. Lathrop is chairman of arrangements and is being assisted in an able manner by William Snelling.

Fast Game Sunday When Smalleys Play

The local baseball fans will be furnished with a good game next Sunday afternoon at the First street ball park when the Smalley Tailors clash with the Fiore-Figoni Hardware company of Oakland. Although the Oakland outfitt is considered one of the fastest organizations in Oakalnd, Manager Smalley is confident that his club will send the hardware boys home on the short end of the score.

The Tailors are planning to enter the Oakland Tribune Mid-winter League, and, judging from their past record, should finish high in the Class A division.

Flash Healey, the classy second sacker, of the Tailors, has finally emerged from a batting slump and is now hitting the agate to all corners of the lot.

Saranap School Fight Ends With Reopening

The controversy between the people of Saranap and the board of trustees of the Walnut Creek school district has been finally settled by Superintendent of Schools William H. Hanlon who has asked permission to assign an emergency teacher to a district when he deems it necessary. This is stipulated in the state law, it was pointed out.

Some time ago the Saranap school was closed by the Walnut Creek board under whose supervision it is run, because it was believed that there was insufficient funds to warrant the maintenance of two schools.

Residents of Saranap immediately instituted a fight to have the school reopened and threatened to carry the fight to the courts, if necessary. Many of the residents of the section refused to send their children to the Walnut Creek school, because of the distance and the fact that they had to travel the highways.

The Saranap school, which will be reopened immediately was attended by about forty pupils when it was closed.
